AN EMPLOYMENT LAW UPDATE

Few organizations would disagree that employees are their most valuable assets. Because employees are becoming increasingly mobile, protecting those assets and the confidential information employees possess has emerged as a critical issue, and many organizations are requiring employees to sign agreements restricting their ability to jump ship.

Those agreements, and related laws protecting a company's trade secrets and other confidential information, can significantly impact your recruiting and retention efforts. Are there potential problems with your company's practices? Do you know how to avoid them? Please join us to learn more useful information about covenants not to compete, trade secrets laws and other restrictions on employee mobility as well as a general update on what's new in employment law.

Our Presenter:

Timothy G. Pepper
Taft Stettinius & Hollister LLP

Tim is a member of Taft's Labor and Employment Practice in the firm's Dayton office. His practice focuses on helping employers run their businesses without being sidetracked by legal disputes with their employees. Tim is also active in civic and professional affairs. He is the Chair of the Board of Trustees of the Dayton Society of Natural History, Inc., which owns and operates the Boonshoft Museum of Discovery and SunWatch Indian Village.
