Presents

CREATING A RECRUITING CULTURE FROM WITHIN

Does your organization take full advantage of the talent pool that is most readily available to it? While it's critical to recruit the best possible talent when it is necessary to go outside, it's arguably even more critical to know what skills and competencies exist within the organization and to ensure they are best utilized.

Come and hear useful tips to improve management of internal talent pools from one of the most successful organizations in the region. Wendy Vloedman will discuss the role of familiar instruments and processes such as job descriptions, skill inventories, career pathing and succession planning.

Our Presenter:

Wendy Vloedman
Vice President of Human Resources for Procter & Gamble Pet Care

During her first seven years with Iams, Wendy Vloedman was a Sales Representative and a District Sales Manager. She was later promoted to Director of Iams University, the corporate learning center. She now oversees all aspects of the division's human resources in the U.S. and around the world.
